

Volunteering at Redbridge Alternative Provision [RAP]

Redbridge Alternative Provision is a pupil referral unit [PRU] committed to supporting young people who have been permanently excluded from or who are at risk of permanent exclusion from mainstream school. We provide inclusive education for young people with a range of educational and social needs in order to maximise and improve their life chances.

Volunteering in a school offers a fantastic source of work experience for those considering a career in teaching or working with young people. It is also a great opportunity to develop communication skills that are valued by all employers, whether working in the public or private sector.

If you are considering applying for teacher training, getting some experience in a school before you apply will not only strengthen your application, but also provide you with an invaluable insight into what teaching is really like through observing classes and shadowing teachers and support staff. The time you spend in school will be invaluable and help you decide whether the teaching profession is for you. The time you spend in a school will be invaluable and you will gain a better understanding of how schools work, how you can fit into teaching, and important insights you can take into your training. It will also help you prepare the strongest application possible and get you fully prepared for the interview process.
